Conflicts of Language and Culture

In “A Story of Conflicts,” Yeghia Aslanian describe his internal conflict about what happened when he was a child and when he came to the United States. He has to struggle with two languages and cultures, as I do. I have Panamanian accent when I speak but I look Chinese. It is not only my culture that makes me a minority, my race also. Many people think that I am Chinese, but I am Panamanian too. They don’t realize that I was born there. The way people look at me is somehow different. They just look at the differences between us. Being in a minority people can affect a person identity in a negative way.

I speak Spanish at school and at home Chinese. It is hard to have two different languages and cultures. Usually when I’m outside in my native country, people can’t believe that I’m Panamanian. They judge my physical look. Is the color of the skin so important? Who am I, a Chinese or a Panamanian? I think that I am both. If I had to choose only one, I would choose Chinese. Because I have absorbed more of Chinese culture than Panamanian culture. However there are positive things about be a minority too. I have the opportunity to experience more than one culture. Having more than one culture is something enriches my life.

Error and Reflection Log Instructions

1. Put every coded error into your log, with a separate chart for each error category: Word Form & Agreement, Word Choice, Clause Structure, Sentence Structure, and Mechanical. You do not need to log Paragraph Structure errors. Remember to list the essay number and the error type. You may create your error log as a digital file or on paper.
2. Write the original error, then correct it. In the left column, write the original sentence. Highlight the error. In the right column, write a corrected sentence. Highlight the correction.
3. Write a reflection paragraph about what you have learned. Try to notice which types of errors you keep making and describe them. Be specific! How will you help yourself correct this problem in the future?
4. Keep adding to your log. All of your essays should be on one log this term. You can change the order of the errors and put similar errors together. This will help you see your progress.

Reflection #1 (based on Essay #E2)

I was surprised to find out that I made so many verb errors. I realized that I have repeated the same mistake when I use modal verbs (can, could, may, might, will, would) with a main verb. These are some examples of a mistake I have repeated many times:

- They can ~~to~~ obtain better health.
- We must ~~to~~ see that it is not easy to obtain good health.
- They can ~~to~~ increase their knowledge.

Now I have learned that I should not write "to" in between a modal verb and the main verb. The correct way to write a modal verb with another verb is like this: [modal verb] + [main verb].

I also learned that...
